What are the prevailing concerns of the anthropologies of the African present? How do they depart from or draw upon earlier anthropological inquiries? What are the socio-cultural preoccupations of these works and what interpretative and representational strategies do they employ?

Drawing on an array of new ethnographies published in the last few years as well as several works in progress, the seminar seeks to chart the major theoretical turns and topical preoccupations of contemporary ethnographic research in Africa. With an eye on method as well as content the course material covers a variety of themes now at the fore of ethnographic inquiry. Organized around the supra-categories of Governance, Embodiment and Locality, they probe the character of neoliberalism and development, violence and state decline, popular culture, urban life, health, the body and the environment. With case studies from East, West, Southern, Central and North Africa (Zambia, Mozambique, Tanzania, South Africa, Nigeria, Gambia, Ghana, Egypt, Burkina Faso, Congo-Kinshasa, Sierra Leone, Cote d’Ivoire, among other locales), the course material covers the whole of the African continent.

Along with the substantive and theoretical claims of the course reading, the class will attend to issues of ethnographic investigation, writing and analysis—how authors work from theory to data to narrative claim. We will likewise probe the histories of our chosen authors and texts to consider the intellectual and interpersonal milieu from which they emerged. Course assignments will require book reviews, intellectual genealogies, synthetic essays and class presentations.

Required Texts:

Please purchase these texts on-line. Whenever possible, copies of the texts will also be placed on course reserve at Library West. Additional reading material will be made available in electronic format. If you have trouble accessing any of the texts or supplementary reading please contact the instructor immediately.

Course Requirements:
1 Bibliographic Brief (5%)
3 book reviews (10% each)
1 Intellectual Genealogy and Presentation (20%)
Review Essay (2 @ 20% each or 1 @ 40%)
Participation (5%)

Book reviews are due on the date of class discussion. No late reviews will be accepted. Students will prepare an intellectual genealogy of a chosen author(s) to be presented and distributed to the class. This should include an overview of the author’s education and occupational background, research interests and field experience along with a list of their (or related) publications and brief discussion of content.

Class attendance and participation are required. The UF Academic Honesty policy applies to all students (http://www.dso.ufl.edu/judicial/academic.htm).
